daughter in a boarding school in the safe east of the USA while he goes off to Arizona to find gold. They stay in contact through letters in which he tells Sarah about his great success at mining and what a fine house he has built. When she is old enough, she decides to surprise her father with a visit. Unfortunately, she is in for more than one surprise. Not only has her father merely a small adobe hut out in the wilderness and (seemingly) no great success with his mine, but just days before her arrival he is killed when his mine caves in. So there she is: A fine young lady from the east stuck in a hut several miles from a small town in the Wild West. Luckily for her, she encounters Jake Redman, part Apache and part white and - as a result - not accepted by either society. The attraction between them is immediate and strong, but their backgrounds are so different that both feel that they don't really suit each other. But then Sarah is faced with great danger and Jake is the only one who can save her... This is a solid western romance which seems realistic and well-researched, isn't biased when it comes to whites and natives, but shows the positive and negative sides of both, and has a great love story. I like both characters. They could easily be clichés, but aren't, and they have depths that make reading their story interesting. I really enjoyed this book and would recommend it, even if you aren't usually that interested in this genre. Just as some background information: This is a reprint of the novel published under the same title in 1989. Kurzbeschreibung Old West passions collide in the first historical romance from #1 New York Times bestselling author Nora Roberts. In Loving Jack, Jackie Jack MacNamara found love while writing a historical romance set in Arizona Territory in the late 1800s. This is that story Half-Apache Jake Redman is as untamed as the rugged land he calls home. Living by his own code, the gunslinger has little tolerance for rules and regulations especially the kind that Sarah Conway embraces. Her talents for entertaining and social niceties have little worth in the Old West. But the Eastern beauty has the heart of a pioneer under her ladylike demeanor. It's a combination that could prove lethal to Jake. A NORA ROBERTS CLASSIC AVAILABLE DIGITALLY FOR THE FIRST TIME Synopsis Half Apache and all man, Jake Redman was more than a match for the wild Arizona Territory. Sarah Conway, on the other hand, was an Eastern lady who belonged anywhere else but on the rugged land Jake loved. Still the stubborn beauty was determined to make Lone Bluff her home.
