He is going to college, where he will share a flat with other guys and have to take care of himself. He knows, this will be a whole new experience and he looks forward to it. But life has more surprises in stock for him than new friends, parties and new knowledge from his college courses. One of his roommates is Max. An out and proud, handsome young man, with a sad past and a sparkling personality, that seems the complete opposite of collected Lewis. Still, they become fast friends and Max makes Lewis come out of his shell. But Lewis soon notices, that it isn't just friendship he feels for Max. He wants him as lover and boyfriend. When Max boyfriend cheats on him, he and Lewis, land after a lot of wine and comfort food, in bed together. But the next day, Max tells Lewis, he doesn't want to risk their friendship, with a rebound. Their attraction to each other is strong. Even so, they both try to make it work as friends, even if Lewis still wants more. Then a trip home brings Lewis news, that make him need Max friendship more than ever, but also strengthen his wish for love and closeness. Maybe he has to move on? Not Just Friends written by Jay Northcote and narrated by Matthew Lloyd Davies is a sweet Friends to lovers romance, told to us from the POV of Lewis a young man, who leaves home for the first time, to go to college and has suddenly more on his plate than figuring out his new courses and taking care of himself for the first time. Lewis always thought he was straight, but his new best friend Max fascinates him so much. Even Lewis ex-girlfriend never evoked such strong feelings in him. And a night in Max Arms, gives him hope, that Max feels the same. But these two have some more hurdles to overcome, before they can find their happiness together. The story starts with introducing Lewis, his family and his new flatmates. And just like Lewis, the listeners calm gets shaken up, with Max arrival in the flat, he and Lewis will share with three other boys. Max is sparkling, catches your attention and you just want to get to know him. From the second, he was part of the story, I was completely drawn in. Just like Lewis was. Even if they seem like complete opposites, the two young men fit and their friendship was fast but very believable. You could see, what Lewis sees in Max, even in the moments Max hurts him. Max is never malicious or selfish. He just has fears and lived through a lot of pain. Max also makes Lewis go out, take chances and embrace life. He brings color and fun, to shy and collected Lewis and deeply cares for his friend. But Max also confuses Lewis. So much. Jay Northcotes writing gives you a lot of insight in Lewis feelings and thoughts. So you can't help but feel with him. His forementioned confusion, his yearning and pining, his heartbreak and the love he feels for Max. The story completely sucks you in. Matthew Lloyd Davies narration catches you and he gives the characters life and their own voice. He fitted the story perfectly. Often I just wanted to hug Lewis and tell Max that getting a boyfriend, doesn't have to mean losing a best friend. With Lewis words: Can't you be both?. To be so drawn into an audiobook, both the writing and narration have to be exquisite and for me Not Just Friends had both. If you love catching and sweet Friends to Lovers-Stories, search no more. You just found a perfect companion for a few hours, well spent in the flat of some cute college boys. 0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich.
